size 7, wt. $242\frac{2}{10}$ grs. 1

834 Silver. Kamnascires and Anzaze, obv. the same, except absence of adjunct, rev. not well struck up, but appears to be intended for the same as the last, very rare, only one other known to the writer, fine size $3\frac{1}{2}$, wt. $60\frac{6}{10}$ grs. 1

 The last coin is unpublished. The preceding is described in the Numismatic Chronicle, vol. xviii, p. 139, where it is stated that only three specimens were known. For the attribution, see the learned Catalogue of Colonel Leake's Collection, in which he judiciously suggests that the "Και Μνασκιρης" of Lucian, should be read "Καμνασκιρης." Colonel Leake calls the King, Capnascires. On the smaller of these coins, the third letter is more like Π than M. The other has missed that part of the legend; but the specimens described in Num. Chron. are said to have M distinct. For the convenience of identification, the spelling adopted in the Numismatic Chronicle has been followed here; but, to be consistent, we ought either to call the King Kamnaskires or Camnascires.
